TEL AVIV, May 3 (AP)-Israeti troops fired tear gas Thursday to quetl a demonstration by Palestinian students in the occupied West Bank, and two all-Palestinian universities were ordered closed.

The universities in Bethlehem and Bir Zeit were searched after they were ordered closed for anti-Israel demonstrations.

At the Vatican-supported Bethlehem University students raised the banned Palestinian flag, burned tyres and threw stones at army vyhicles, University President Brother Joseph Lowenstein told the Associated Press by teleplinne.

Troops arrived and surrounded the walled campus, he said, and negotiations started to have the students leave. "They fired tear gas in, and then everything was quiet for a while." Brother Joseph

After a four-bour siege, the students filed nut, surrendering their identification rards, which they will have to retrieve from the police on Friday, the president said. Dr. Gahi Baramki, acting president at Bir Zeit, said the military authorities "gave me to understand that they were nut optimistic that we could reopen soon." Military sources said Bethlehem University,

She said he was not scriuusly hurt and did not require hospitalisation. Derrick, about 20, is a son of Dr. Wayne Derrick, an American who is head librurian at the university.

Israeli press reports say some 100 Palestinian youths, many of them Bir Zeit students, woved banned Patestinian flags and barricaded the road Wednesday to protest Jewish settlements in the West Bank and an Israeli nationalist march.

Israeli cars were stuned and shuts were fired, woulding one youth. Police are investigating the shooting. The army says no soldiers were in the vicinity at the time. The investigation was focused on the idea that an armed Israeli settler fired the shot, and the Jerusalem Post said witnesses reported one shot came from a carload of Jewish settlers driving to the nationalist march,

The Maariv newspaper reported that the settlers at Neve Tsuf, eight kilometres West of Bir Zeit, called a general strike Thursday to protest the lack of security at Bir Zeit, a town they have to drive through to reach occupied Jerusalem. Burnt bridges

PRESIDENT SADAT now stands alone on the other side of a gulf of hostility which he has created between himself and the rest of the Arab World.

His contemptuous, and contemptible, remarks the other day about Saudi Arabia, Syria, Jordan and the Palestinians leave no room for further dealings with him -- at least until he chooses to pull back from the reckless and treacherous road that he has defiantly set out on. Even responsible officials in Sudan, which has been wedded to Egypt in an association that was fast approaching federation, now feel obliged to dissociate themselves from the anti-Arab venom that is pouring out of Cairo.

The Saudis have every justification in expressing uncharacteristic outrage, as they have done, about Mr. Sadat's mean verbal barrage against them. By ridiculing their contribution to efforts to hold the Arab consensus together in the face of Mr. Sadat's dangerous irresponsibility, and by defaming the late King Faisal, the Egyptian president has committed a grievous offence which serves no other purpose than to east grave doubt on his own ability to distinguish fact from fantasy.

Equally grievous were his slanderous assertions about the Palestinians, whom he described as having no rightful authority over their own national destiny. To say this at a time when Sadat proposes to lend Egypt's considerable weight to an all-out Zionist effort to perpetuate eternally the occupation of the Palestinian and Arab homeland is to add furious insult to crippling injury.

What worries us most about Mr. Sadat's frenzied haranguing, however, is his seeming desire to take the whole Egyptian people with him to the brink of the precipice, from where they are presumably to spend the rest of their lives screaming insults at their Arab brethren. This does an extreme disservice--perhaps the ultimate one, in its sense of national betrayal--to the Egyptian people. It damages them not only by denying the present generation of Egyptians a share of the true peace which they, as much as--if not more than--the entire Arab nation, crave and deserve, but by cutting Egyptians adrift from the historical. cultural, political and, yes, financial links which they need to survive and endure as a part of the great Arab People. It is criminal, in the name of political arrogance or opportunism, to try to pit Egyptian againstPalestinian, Egyptian against Saudi, Egyptian against Jordanian, Egyptian against Syrian, in this way. It is especially criminal for Mr. Sadat to do this while at the same time opening his arms wide to welcome and embrace the Zionists who are all the while maintaining and consolidating their suppression of the national rights of the Palestinians and other Arabs.

Recent Arab history is replete with examples of national leaders overcoming momentary or periodic estrangement in the name of the greater welfare of themselves and their people. President Sadat, however, has now set new standards of contemptibility, discourtesy and dishonour. Our response shall have to be measured accord-

AL DUSTOUR likewise devotes its editorial comments to praise of the King's Labour Day speech from which it quotes extensively. The paper places particular importance on the King's differentiating between Jordan's firm stand based on the legitimacy of Arab rights and a policy of intransigence on Middle East issues.

The paper also concurres with the King's statement that Jordan will continue to address the world rationally and moderately, and his call for Arabs to stick together in order to be able to build up their strength in the face of "covetting foreign pow-

NOTEBOOK

Elections as opportunities

By Rami G. Khouri

IT IS ARGUED by the torchbearers of conventional wisdom that the Arabs should expect little movement from the United States on solving the Palestinian issue during the coming 18 months, because this is the height of the electioneering period in the United States, when it is impossible for an aspirant to the presideocy to do anything but heap praise on Israel.

I do not accept this argument, and I believe that it is a convenient excuse for the Arab World to sit on its hands, licking its wounds and driving itself into an iocreasingly unproductive freozy of worry, self-doubt and political impotence.

l am an inveterate optimist because I cannot see any possible solution to the Arab-Israeli conflict that does not satisfy the national aspirations of the Palestinians, and there is no other place to do this than in the occupied West Bank and Gaza.

This is not my own view only, but that of the global consensus that is resisted only by the government of Israel. Therefore, it is only a question of time and the right combination of diplomatic activity that forces the Israelis to withdraw to the 1967 borders and simultaneously activates that process of Palestinian national self-determination that is 30, if not 60, years overdue. The Israeli government today pledges it will never let this' happen. In fact, this will happen, and I think it will happen within no more than five years, for the very simple reason that there is no other alter-

The corollary to this is that it will never happen by itself, and it will certainly oever happen as a result of an Arab approach that decides to take a two-year vacation every time there is a presidential election in the United States.

The rights of the Palestiniaos have nothing to dowith electoral timetables 9,000 kilometres away from Jerusalem. For anyone to institute such a tie-up is an evasion of responsibility reflecting the absence of a coherent strategy to bring about the kind of fair peace that has also been sighted, in its outlines at least, by the overwhelming majority of peoples and states. This is the consensus of U.N. resolutions 242 and 338, based on the reciprocal recognition of Palestinian and Israeli national rights and political legitimacy.

But while I am certain that Palestinian national rights will be satisfied in Palestine itself, I am also certain that this will never happen until the Israelis are grabbed by their fat little necks and brought kicking and screaming into the arena of common sense and realism.

It is naive to think that the United States is either willing or able to do this by itself. It is not. Furthermore, left to themselves, without an effective counterforce from the Arah World, the Americans and Israelis will simply perpetuate the status quo that is based on the principle that not only should the Palestinians remain disenfranchised, but they should also remain ignored. The Israelis institute this as an active policy: the Americans do it in a more passive way, such as by ignoring the PLO.

The fact that all this can go on is a reflection of an imbalance to the global diplomatic arena. There is no credible Arab force today that compels the Americans to do anything different from what they have done in the pist two years, which is essentially to formulate a Mideast strategy based on a combination of political expediency and personal desperation.

But this does not happen in a vacuum. It han pens because the rest of the Arab World feluses no come up with a coherent political strategy that mobilises all Arab resources to a lay to rest the silly Camp David-approach, and b) competing United States and the Western world in general to push actively for a reasonable peace settlement based on the principles of 242

It is oecessary, in the first instance, to hit the Americans over the head with the Palestinian reals ity, and to make them understand that the Arab Israeli conflict will only be solved when American power and influence are directed towards making Israel accept the Palestinians, reversing the present course of using American power and influence to sweep the full dimensions of the Palistinian nation under the diplomatic and linguistic

This means a strong and coherent Arab offen sive is required to swamp Camp David under the full force of its own contradictions. What we live seen to date in the Arab World is a series of defensive and largely symbolic steps geared from to satisfying the psychological dictates of Arab unity than to the practical requirements of a global diplomatic process that is supposed to lead to fair peace in Palestine.

It is difficult to see how the Americans of Israelis are to take the Arabs seriously, when the Arabs have reacted to the singlerous Comp have process by only a minimal strategy based or lowest common denominator, and reflecting attitude that reminds one procedurally stonewalling tactics that can perhaps been a sign ation at the very best, though not even that mire is assured.

Have we really given the Americans and reason to take us senously. Have we translate our ucquestioned determination to reast the ha torical hooliganism and intellectical cast Camp David into an offensive force that has a practical meaning? -

Have we giveo the Israelis any good reason take us seriously? Or have we only realing their thinking that they can wrap the Americ nation around their little linger and the Arabs a do nothing to after the situation

The American election year is not an obstack Mideast peace making it is an opportunity force the hand of Mr. Carter. It is a timely opportunity tunity to push Mr. Carter to make these import decisions that he has so far avoided praking favour of the expediency that Mr. Sadar offer

Prince Hassan: Israel fears aftermath of a just peace

AMMAN, May 3 -- Israel is putting the squeeze on the West Bank and Jordan is conving under pressure from those involved in the Camp David agreements" because of Jordan's adherence to its destated position on the occupied territories. Jerusalem in particular, His Highness Crown Prince Hassin has said.

In an interview with the Kuwanti rfaily Al (Jabas this week, Prince Hassan made it clear that Israel is refrising to withdraw to the borders of 1967 and to allow the Palystimans self-determination because if that were to happen the Arabs in Jordan, the West Bank and those living in Israel usell. taken together, would constitute a potent force outmanhering the Jews. The Arabs would their account for 55 per cent of the copulation of Palestine and fordan and the Jews only 45 per cent. In that event the effectiveness of the Arab majority would become apparent, and that is precisely what Israel is trying to prevent.

Asked whether plots were being harched against Jordan, the Prince replied that a plot has been at work since 1967 when the Israeli occupation began, Israel has pursued a policy of geographically cutting up the territory of the West Bank with Jewish settlements, dividing population concontations from each other, disrupting the life of the occupied territory and breaking up ineconomic links with Jordan while making it economically dependent on Israel.

Israeli settlements began as military camps west of the Jordan River and gradually turned into a ring of settlements around the Nablus area, Israeli settlements now exercise a ring of control in the north and a circle of control in the south, the Prince added,

The Camp David peace process has excluded Jerusalem Irom all the negotiations; this is an attempt on the part of Israel to reduce the effectiveness at the concentrations of Arab population. In order to fully achieve this purpose, Israel has besieged Jerusalem with at ring of settlements. Not only that, but it has also embarked on cermomic ineasures aimed at depriving the Arabs of the natural resources of their country.

Actually, the Israeli settlements constitute only six per cent of the area of the West Bank, yet with the land around them being expropriated for settlement purposes, they will take up 27 per cent of the total area of the West Bank, he said,

Emphasising that Israel is lighting the Arahs ecruiconically, Prince Hassan explained that the Israeli measures have rendered the Arabs living in the north less productive, while those in the sinith are deprived of the chance of exploiting the fortile area of the Jordan Valley.

Israel has become the primary

As an example, he said than 22,000 Arab viriihs who had been engaged in mairnal labour in Israel last year left the West Bank ton Jordan and the Gull. This new phenomenon which Israel is exporting is part of what an Israeli study described as "the mencal lett", Prince Hassan went on,

Jordan constitutes a butter state between Israel on the one hand and Meeen. Medina and the oilproducing states on the other, It is only natural that Jordan should be the target of conspiracies such as those of sturing secturian conflicts as Israel had done in Lebation.

Explaining the Israeli systems of neutralising Arab majornies. Prince Hassan cited the example of Nazareth and the clamp down or the Arabs there on the Day of the Land in 1976. He also pointed our that the "Haddarl Republic" in south Lebanon constitutes an Israeli sphere of influence, and that any luture conflict in the area will endanger the lives of the besieged Arali population. This is: part of an Israeli scheme which ordan is flying to expose, the Prince said,

Asked whether he anticipated an Israeli attack against Jordan or some other Arab country, Prince Hassan said that the years of the U.S. presidential elections are known to be the time when Israel embarks on military operations against the Arabs,

The fact remains, he added, that the U.S. cannot curb Israel's ambitirms, Moreover, "the U.S. commitments to Israel's security has exceeded all reasonable limits. Israel is always on the lookout for an opportunity" for military adventure, he said, as happened recently in south Lehanon, "Inpractice, there is indeed a serious danger," the Prince said.

Answering a questirm rut the role of the U.S. in the Middle East, Prince Hassan said that the sepatate Egyptian-Israeli treaty implies that the U.S. has lost as objective outlook. The U.S. is no longer an honest broker, "it has become a part of the problem," he

"The United States should reconsider the usefulness of contributing to the quest for peace in this manner," he added, "If the United States is under the impression that its current contributorn is going to be decisive for the question of war or peace in the Middle East, it is entirely mistaken."

The Prince suggested that the administrations. U.N. Security Council Resolution 242 and Kissinger's efforts were steps in the pation of the West Bank, as envisaged at Camp David, is inadmissible," he said. Answering a question on the impact of the separate Egyptian-Israeli treaty on Jordan's domestic from, and whether there are attempts to fabricate incidents designed to kindle civil strife in fordan as happened in Lebanon, he said reports in the foreign press on what is going on within Jordan are inaccurate at times. There should be irrore objective reporting, he added. The press should avoid the propagation of extremist propaganda serving Israeli plans to divide the Arabs into bantistans among which Israel would be the dominant Power

Lashing out at tribal ethnocentrisin, the Prince said: "It is my belief that for a mair to have Palestianan, Jordanian, Turkoman, Armewan, Azerbaijan or Erifrean attiliations indicates a weakness and an incapacity to face up to the challenge of our times, Public consciousness is the only guarantee of collesion on the domestic from, he went on.

Jordan's policy of open bridges, its reoperation with the Arabs in the occupied territories and encouragement to them tristay on their lands, its trade with the West Bank, trying to keep the Jordanian administrative set up going in the West Bank and the role placed by the Jurdanian religious endowments institutions in Jerusalem and the holy places are lactors which bolster the legitimacy of Arab sovereignty over the occupied territories, he said.

"I do not believe there is any difference of injinion between the PLO and ourselves in so far as all this is concerned. On the contrary, we have been receiving pleas from the Arabs of the West Bank that Jurdan should continue to assume its responsibilities in these mat-"We hope that such responsibilities will be temporary pending the termination of the occurpatiem and until such time as the Palestinian people can express their will in their own land, determine their future, and decide on the form of relationship they want" with Jordan, he said,

"The Baghdad resolutions have in practice strengthened the sense of Arah solidarity at a crucial period when our identity as Arabs and our capacity to survive in this region as nations with a noble past and future is at stake. Our ability to do this is linked to our capacity to croperate, and to locus on what we believe to be important now and in the luture. It is also linked to our capacity fir generate Arab strength which is founded on polinical strength and the power of persuasion." the Prince said.

Arab coordination must be comprehensive. Ecsnomic, social and military cooperation are essential, particularly now that Israel has realised its historic dream of separating Egypt from the rest of the Arah nation, he

"I believe." Prince Hassan confinued, "that if we Arabs stick together at this juncture, then we can prove to the majority of the American people that the U.S. policy of placing its bets on Israel on the one hand, and on Egypt on the other, simply because it is the most populous Arah state, is

North Korean president offers 'new initiatives' in talks with Waldheim

May 3 (AP) -- Promising that he would not arrack the South, North Korea's President Kim Il Sung today met with U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim and offered new initiatives that the U.N. official said might break the deadlock in talks between the two

"My impression is that there are some openings, some pos-sibilities, Mr. Waldheim told reporters after meeting with the 67-vear-old North Korean leader at his palace in Pyongyang.

Mr. Waldheim declined to be specific, but U.N, sources said Mr. Kim indicated "a certain flexibility" in his long-standing position that there was no role for South Korea in negotiadons to replace the armistice that ended the Korean War. The North has said that only the United States should be involved in such discussions because it is the main component of the U.N. peacefigured in the cuts involving vador, the Central African oil company sources said. The sources said the new Ugandan gov-debts left by Field Marshal Amin's ousted regime were ack-point where no supplies bave been delivered to the civilian market

ILO links health care system to more jobs

GENEVA, May 3 (R)--Expanding primary health care services in developing countries open up more jobs as well as improving the well-being of workers, an article in an International Labour Organisation (ILO) publication said yesterday. It bad been estimated that a properly functioning primary health care system in Pakistan would lead to the direct creamon of 70,000 jobs, the article in the periodical International Labour Review said. It would also lead to creation of additional jobs in the related sectors such as health, manpower training and pharmaceuncal production. A past tendency for developing states to model their public health services on those of industrialised countries had resulted in these services becoming centred (argely in cities and towns, and accessible mainly to a small, privileged section of the population. To help change this situation, there was now a widespread trend in these lands towards establishing a body of primary health workers who could be trained more rapidly, powerful cult of personality in his country, was the fourth major Asian communist leader that Mr. Waldheim has met on his peacemaking swing. Previously be talked with Vietnamese Prime Minister Pham Van Dong in Hanoi, and with Chinese Premier Hua Guofeng and Vice Premier

Deng Xiaoping in Peking. Mr. Waldheim said later on his plane en route to Tokyo for an overnight stop that two major issues came up in his Pyongyang talks. The first was procedures for discussing reunification of divided Korea and the other was the replacement of the armistice

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter immediately said that the administration would seek to restore the aid. He said the cuts would make it more difficult for the government to achieve its humanitarian and foreign policy

The committee cited internal chaos as well as human rights abuses in seeking to cut off aid to El Salvador, Guatemala and Nicaragua. Pakistan is already barred from receiving aid because it has imported equipment that could enable it to make nuclear weapons. The committee action merely confirmed the earlier cut-

Ethiopia was included because its new pro-Soviet government has not paid for the expropriation of U.S. property.

The committee voted to end aid worth $17 million to Afghanistan because of the role the Marxist government there played in the February kidnapping and death of U.S. Ambassador Adolph Dubs. Haiti was cut out for failing to implement fiscal reforms and take steps against corruption. The committee recommended deletion of $12.8 million to Panama on the grounds that it was already receiving funds under the Panama Canal Treaty which goes into effect on Oct. 1 The House of Representatives also deleted the Panamanian aid from its foreign assistance bill.

Under the bill, the Asian Development Bank receives $445 million and the African Development Bank $4 billion over the same period.

Rome Policeman killed in bombing of party office

ROME, May 3 (R)-A gang of up to 20 left-wing bombers including three teenage girls killed one policeman and wounded two today after bursting into an office of Italy's Christian Democratic

The extremists, who told party workers "This is a proletarian action," set off several bombs which devastated the party's Rome committee headquarters. Their attack was apparently part of a far-left plan to disrupt ftlay's general election on June 3 and 4.

The raiders scrawled slogans on office walls as they planted their bombs. One of the slogans said: We will transform the fraudulent elections into a real class war."

Police said the Urban guerrillas drove up to the christian democratic office in Piazza Nicosia shortly after nine a.m. and forced their way inside.

brandishing sub-machine guns. They forced the party workers to leave, after bandcuffing some of them, and laid the bombs. The party workers told reporters later they saw three girls in the gang who appeared to be about 15 years old.

As the guerrillas were ready to leave, 15 minutes after launching their assault, a police car arrived outside. One of the gang shot and killed one of the policemen and wounded the other two from a window on the first floor, police sources

The bombs exploded after the gang escaped, wrecking the party offices and smashing hundreds of windows in nearby buildings.

Scores of police in uniform and plain clothes. some wearing bullet-proof vests and others aboard armoured cars, joined a huge search for the guerrillas. Helicopters hovered overhead, trying to spot the fleeing gang, but by noon police had failed to find any trace of them.

Outside the huilding the dead policeman Antonio Mea, lay under a blanket. Shocked and tearful party workers later returned to the debris of their offices and gazed incredulously at the borken glass and shattered furniture.

Many immigrants are exploited, discriminated agains

UNITED NATIONS, May 3 (R)--More immigrants now go to Western Europe than to the United States, and in many countries they are exploited, underpaid and discriminated against, according to the World Federation of Trade Unions.

In a report to the economic and social council, published yesterday, the federation said the situation for illegal immigrants was most difficult. but it was "no less disgraceful' for temporary migrants. Even legal immigrants usually had to settle for jobs with few prospects.

In West Germany, France and Switzerland, arduous, unhealthy, badly paid jobs were increasingly becoming the domain left to foreigners, the report said. In Belgium, most miners were migrant workers.

U.S. brings suit against 7 oil companies

WASHINGTON, May 3 (R) -- The U.S. Government yesterday brought a suit of $1.7 billion against seven large oil refining com-

oil. The suit brought to $3.5 billion the total sought by the Depart-

Department officials said the suit did not allege that the companies had wilfully violated pricing regulations. The seven were Texaco,

Marathon, Gulf, Atlantic Richfield and Standard Oil of Ohio,

California and Indiana. The suit alleges that, shortly after the 1973

Arab oil embargo, the seven incorrectly indentified certain oil wells

Japan grants $100m. for Asian food production

MANILA, May (R)--Japan today promised to increase its aid to the world's poorest countries and to provide $100 million this year to help increase food production in Asia. Japanese Finance Minister

Ippei Kaneko, addressing the 12th annual meeting of the Asian Development Bank here, said Japanese united grant aid could eventually reach $1 billion. He told delegates: "In 1979, Japan will offer a grant of over $100 million, more than double the amount of the previous year, to support programmes to increase food production in developing countries, mainly in Asia." Mr. Kaneko also promised to see that Japan provided a reliable market for countries seeking to raise capital for investment. He said Asian countries had already

Libya won't recognise Chad's 'fake' government denounced Chad's new government as illegal and said it will bring about more bloodshed.

A statement issued by the Foreign Ministry in Tripoli and transmitted to Reuters vesterday by the official news agency Jana said that the Libyan Jamahiriyah would not recognise the "fake" government formed on Monday by guerrilla leader Mohammed Shawa.

The statement said that a legal government in Chad could only be created through the implementation of a peace agreement signed by rival factions in March to end two months of civil war in Chad.

After the Kano pact, however, Libya refused to recognise a transitional government including Frolinat leaders which held power

The Kano agreement was signed by four men: President Malloum: Prime Minister Hissan Habre, whose supporters had been fighting the president's; Mr. Goukouni Oueddi, the chief of Frolinat: and Mr. Aboubakar Abhemamane of the so-called Third Army, a Nigerian-backed force which operated in western

Comeback for chemicals indust

LONDON--Odd cracks are starting to appear in the grim exterior presented to the world by the men who run Europe's chemical industry. Certainly the optimists can discern the beginnings of a grin at Bayer and BASF, while at Hoechst there is an air of smugness that was not apparent a month ago. Not that the big three chemical and fibres groups in West-Germany are hogging all the good news. After a year of disastrous profits in 1977 followed by complete stagnation in 1978, the European chemical industry as a whole is experiencing the first signs of a real recovery. At ICI and Akzo of Holland, management is showing confidence about the immediate outlook for earnings.

Hoechst provided the first breakthrough in March. Throwing all caution to the wind, the company predicted a clear improvement in sales for the opening three months of 1979, and at the same time disclosed that pre-tax profits at its West German parent company had emerged from 1978 with a rise of three per cent to DM711 million or $382 million.

In isolation there is nothing very exciting about this kind of figurework. But once the industry's analysts had got to work on the quarter-to-quarter trends, it could be seen that the final three months of last year bad produced a quite dramane recovery in sales and profits.

But the key to last year's improving profits—and the main reason why most chemical company executives are now less worried about profit margins—is improving selling prices. Tentative indications suggest that the higher prices currently being quoted by the industry show every sign of sticking.
